Possessive adjectives modify the nouns that follow them. They show ownership.

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS

Possessive pronouns are used to show ownership or relationship.

REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS

- Reflexive pronouns reflect (turn back) the action done by the subject. In other words, the subject of the sentence is the same as the object of it:

I hurt myself with a knife while cutting vegetables.

We blame ourselves for the mistake.

- Reflexive pronouns are used as objects of a preposition referring to the subjects:

John talks to himself when he's nervous.

The children got dressed by themselves.

- Reflexive pronouns are used when you want to emphasize the subject, in this case they have an intensive meaning. They can be omitted from the sentence without changing its meaning:

I baked it myself. (on my own)

I know her, she will do the project herself. (no one else will help her)

First-person	Singular	I am teaching myself how to play the piano.
	Plural	We can entertain ourselves .
Second-person	Singular	Don't beat yourself up about it.
	Plural	Dust yourselves off and get back to work.
Third-person	Masculine singular	John talks to himself sometimes.
	Feminine singular	She was proud of herself for finishing the marathon.
	Neuter / inanimate singular	My cat's litter box cleans itself .
	Gender-neutral singular (epicene)	Makoto taught themself to read at a young age.
	Plural	They blamed themselves for what happened.
Impersonal	-	It is important to trust oneself and rely on one's own judgment.

Relative clauses
and relative pronouns

- ❑ Relative pronouns introduce relative clauses. A relative clause tells us which person or thing the speaker means / refers to. The two sentences can be linked into one.
- ❑ We use a relative pronoun to substitute, for example, a common item in two sentences and join these two sentences in one:

Sue is a doctor. She works in the local hospital.

Sue is a doctor who works in the local hospital.

The Internet is a novel tool. It helps us to do things faster.

The Internet is a novel tool which helps us to do things faster.

- The most common relative pronouns are who, whom, whose, which, and that.
When and where can be used as relative pronouns as well.

- Relative pronouns are placed directly after the noun or pronoun they modify:

Marie Curie is the woman who discovered radium.

This is George, whom you met at our house last year.

I have a friend whose cat is annoying.

The book, which is now out of print, has all the information you need.

This is the TV series that everyone is talking about.

- The relative adverbs "when" and "where" are also used as relative pronouns. In these cases, "when" and "where" introduce clauses that describe time and place.

Grandma remembers a time when radio shows were popular.

I want to go to a resort where the food is free.

➤ Who / that: refer to people.

The people who / that live next door have 6 children.

Emi is a student who is studying English.

➤ Which / that: refer to things or animals.

A turtle is an animal which / that lives in the sea.

That company is the one which makes agrochemicals.
