P R E S E N T

perfect

Present Perfect

(has / have) + (past participle)

UNFINISHED ACTIONS

▶ We use this tense when we want to talk about unfinished actions or states or habits that started in the past and continue to the present. Usually we use it to say 'how long' and we need 'since' or 'for'. We often use stative verbs:

I've known Karen since 1994.

She has lived in London for three years.

I have worked here for six months.

SINCE AND FOR

➤ We use 'since' with a fixed time in the past (2004, February 23rd, last year, etc.).
The fixed time can be another action, which is in the past simple (since I was at school, since I arrived, etc.):

I've liked chocolate since I was a child.

She's been here since 2 pm.

We use 'for' with a period of time (two hours, three years, six months, etc.):

I've known Julie for ten years.

She's had a cold for a week.

FINISHED ACTIONS

➤ Life experience. These are actions or events that happened sometime during a person's life. We don't say when the experience happened and the person needs to be alive now. We often use the words “ever” (at some time before now) in questions and “never” (at not time before now) here:

I have been to Tokyo several times.

Has she ever read Borges?

They have visited Paris three times.

We have never seen that film.

With an unfinished time word (this month, this week, today). The period of time is still continuing:

I haven't seen her this month.

She's drunk three cups of coffee today.

I've already moved house twice this year!

We CAN'T use the present perfect with a finished time word, with a finished time word we have to use the simple past tense:

~~I've seen him yesterday.~~ I saw him yesterday.

FINISHED ACTIONS

➤ Results. A finished action with a result in the present (focus on result). We often use the present perfect to talk about something that happened in the recent past, but that is still true or important now. Sometimes we can use the past simple here, especially in American English:

I've lost my keys (so I can't get into my house).

She's hurt her leg (so she can't play tennis today).

They've missed the bus (so they will be late).

FINISHED ACTIONS

News. We can also use the present perfect to talk about something that happened recently, even if there isn't a clear result in the present. This is common when we want to introduce news and we often use the words 'just / yet / already / recently / lately'. However, the past simple is also correct in these cases, especially in American English:

The King has given a speech recently.

I've just seen the Dean.

The mayor hasn't announced a new plan for the railways yet.

She hasn't seen him lately.

Has she ordered her book yet?

BEEN & GONE

➤ In this tense, we use both 'been' and 'gone' as the past participle of 'go', but in slightly different circumstances. We use 'been' (often when we talk about life experience) to mean that the person we're talking about visited the place and came back:

I've been to Paris (in my life, but now I'm in London, where I live).

She has been to school today (but now she's back at home).

➤ We use 'gone' (often when we are talking about an action with a result in the present) to mean that the person went to the place and is at the place now.

A: Where's John? B: He's gone to the shops. (He's at the shops now.)

Julie and Mark have gone to Mexico for three weeks (now they are in Mexico).

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN PRESENT PERFECT AND PAST SIMPLE

Present Perfect Simple	Past Simple
Unfinished actions that started in the past and continue to the present: I've known Julie for ten years (and I still know her).	Finished actions: I knew Julie for ten years (but then she moved away and we lost touch).
A finished action in someone's life (when the person is still alive: life experience): My brother has been to Spain three times.	A finished action in someone's life (when the person is dead): My great-grandmother went to Mexico three times.
A finished action with a result in the present: I've lost my keys! (The result is that I can't get into my house now).	A finished action with no result in the present: I lost my keys yesterday. It was terrible! (Now there is no result. I got new keys yesterday).
With an unfinished time word (this week, this month, today): I've seen John this week.	With a finished time word (last week, last month, yesterday): I saw John last week.

"I used to bury my bones.
Now I upload them to the cloud."

We use 'used to' for something that happened regularly in the past but no longer happens:

I used to smoke a packet a day but I stopped smoking two years ago.

Ben used to travel a lot in his job but now, since his promotion, he doesn't.

I used to drive to work but now I take the bus.

We also use it for something that was true but no longer is:

There used to be a cinema in the town but now there isn't.

She used to have really long hair but she's had it all cut off.

I didn't use to like him but now I do.

Used to always has a past meaning, but we only use it for something that happened regularly. We can't use it for something that happened only one time in the past. For one-time past events we use the simple past tense.

We use the negative form didn't use to to talk about things that did not happen regularly in the past. Notice that there is no -d at the end of the word “use”. We can also use the expression never used to:

She didn't use to play tennis when she was younger.

She never used to play tennis when she was younger.

➤ To ask a question we use Did + use to...? Again, notice that there is no -d at the end of the word “use”:

Did he use to like going to the sea on holidays?

Did you use to like English when you were at the secondary school?
