- We don't normally use the 24-hour clock in English. We use a.m. (also: am - ante meridiem, before noon) for the morning and p.m. (also: pm - post meridiem, after noon) for the afternoon and night. These expressions are formal.
- You can also use in the morning, in the afternoon, in the evening, at night after the time. These expressions are informal.
- Use in the morning before 12 o'clock noon, after 12 o'clock noon use in the afternoon.
- To change from afternoon to evening, from evening to night and from night to morning depends on our sense of time.

📌 AT ➡ for a precise moment.

Examples: At 9 o'clock, at night, at the moment, at sunset, at midday, at midnight, at dinnertime, at bedtime, at Christmas.

📌 ON ➡ for a special day, days of the week, precise date.

Examples: On my birthday, on Wednesday, on October 6th, on Monday afternoon, on Independence Day, on Christmas Day.

📌 IN ➡ for periods of time:

Examples: In the morning, in the afternoon, in the evening, in 1999, in 2016, in the future, in the 21st century, in summer, in two months.
